

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

July 16, 1984

Dear Bill:

As principal coordinator of the preparations for my foreign travel, you made major contributions to the success of my visits to China and the London Summit. Your insight and effort have been instrumental in helping to project U.S. foreign policy at its finest -- our rebounding economy, our striving for the development of democratic institutions around the world and our dedication to world peace. You have also played a key role in coordinating our efforts among the allies to improve international energy emergency preparedness.

All of these accomplishments reflect your professionalism and dedication. Thanks, Bill, for your superb and lasting contributions.

Sincerely,
