

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

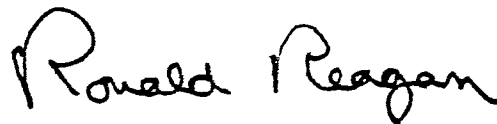

July 29, 1983

Dear Bill:

I commend you for your outstanding contribution to the success of the Williamsburg Summit. Your exceptional work on East-West energy issues, your contribution in putting together the concise final briefing package for the negotiations, and your draft of the original Williamsburg Declaration were of great assistance in forging both working documents and a clear and effective end product.

As you know, the Summit underscored dramatic accomplishments achieved among western countries in economic and security areas. Cooperative efforts to advance worldwide economic recovery, to stem the tide of inflation, to manage international debt, and to stimulate new investment in research and technology marked the beginning of a new era for all involved in the Summit. You have made a major contribution to an endeavor which will bear fruit in decades to come.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Ronald Reagan". The signature is written in a cursive, slightly slanted style.
